6. Event Rules: The following Event Rules shall apply to the Tournament.

1. Tournament Structure

1.1 Playoffs and Finals with Single Elimination

The Bakugan Dimensions Holiday Tournament operates as one (1) playoff and finals day making up thirty-two (32) players competing in a single elimination playoff tournament. All players sign up during the sign-up week prior to the playoff and final competition day and then participate in a single-elimination format.

1.1.1 Tournament Sign-Ups

The Bakugan Dimensions Holiday Tournament has one (1) week of sign-ups prior to the playoff and final competition day. The sign-up week starts on Monday, November 22nd, 2010 at 1:00pm PT and ends on Friday, November 26th, 2010 at 1:00pm PT. During this time, any player of any level with any level Bakugan can sign up by visiting the official Bakugan Dimensions Holiday Tournament sign-up thread at the official Bakugan community by accessing <http://my.bakugan.com/orca/#topic/p-N--2010-11-19.htm> . The first thirty-two (32) players who sign up will be invited to participate in the playoffs and finals on Saturday, December 4th between the hours of 10:00 AM and 2:00 PM PT (Pacific Time). The first (32) players who sign up will be sent an email invitation. They will be required to accept this invitation to participate in the Bakugan Dimensions Holiday Tournament Playoffs and Finals and reply to the email confirming their acceptance within 48 hours of email distribution. Failure to do so will result in the forfeiture of their reserved match and scheduled match time.

1.1.2 Single-Elimination Format on Final Competition Day

The first thirty-two (32) players to sign up will be invited to compete in the final competition to be conducted on Saturday, December 4th between the hours of 10:00 AM and 2:00 PM PT (Pacific Time). Full tournament schedule and match times can be viewed by accessing the Bakugan Dimensions Holiday Tournament Playoff and Finals Live Bracket. Participants play until they lose a round. When a player loses, his or her standing is based on which round the loss occurred. The Bakugan Dimensions Holiday Tournament Final Competition Day will have 5 rounds of single elimination.

1.1.2 A Sudden Death

In a single-elimination round, there can be no drawn games. Therefore, when time is called for a round and the round-end procedure is finished; if both players are in a tie a sudden death match will be played. In the sudden death match, the first player to defeat one of three Bakugan in the opponent's arsenal will be deemed as the winner of the match.

1.4 Tie-Breakers

Tie-breakers are used to advance the players in whose match results in a tie.

1.4.1 Tie-Breaker

A player's tie-breaker is the first player to defeat one of three Bakugan in the opponent's arsenal.

1.5 Byes

In any round in which there are an odd number of players, a random player will receive a bye. This counts as a win.

1.6 Round Length

A round starts when a tournament official announces the start of the round. A round ends when a tournament official announces the end of the round. Where times are posted and available, they are to be used as guidelines only and the official announcements are the final determining factor for the starts and ends of rounds.

1.6.1 Round-End Procedure

When the end of a round is announced, if either player is still in a match, play continues until the match is finished. If, at that time, both players result in a tie, then the match is a draw. Please refer to the tie-breaker section for how to handle this situation.

1.6.2 Time Extensions

A tournament official may give a time extension for special circumstances in a match. This is a very unusual circumstance and will be made clear to the players involved in the match that it occurs.

2. Tournament Rules

The Bakugan Dimensions Holiday Tournament rules supplement the ones normally governing matches in the game. These rules are:

2.1 Starting Bakugan, Fighting Styles, and Other Elements

A player is responsible for finalizing their starting Bakugan, Fighting Styles, Battle Gear, Cards and any other elements of a match prior to the start of their designated match.

2.2 Game Set Per Round

A player may choose to switch the Bakugan, Battle Gear, Cards, Fighting Styles, etc. he or she is using between rounds for each match. However, once they are determined for the match, they may not be switched during the course of a match.

2.2.1 a. Level Cap/Ranges

In addition to the limits set by the game rules, there may be a brawler and/or Bakugan XP level limit set forth by the Tournament officials. Currently, the tournament is open to brawler avatars and in-game Bakugan of every level and G-Power. During the course of the tournament the participating brawler must meet the level requirements determined by the Tournament officials in order to facilitate fair gameplay.

2.2.2 Game Set Verification

Occasionally, a random check of a player's match set will be made during an event. In such cases where it is relevant, a tournament official will ask to see the player's Bakugan, Battle Gear, Fighting Styles, etc. Insofar as this may cause a delay for that particular round for the individual and his or her opponent, additional time will be given to them as appropriate.

2.3 Leaving a Tournament

A player may leave a tournament at any time. If this is done during a match, the player concedes that match and is dropped from the event. If this is done after a match, but before pairings for the next round have occurred, the player is dropped from the event but the results of the just finished match stand as is. In both cases, the appropriate tournament official must be notified.

2.3.1 No Show for a Match

If a player does not show for a match, it will be presumed that the player has left the tournament. The opponent will receive a win as if having received a bye. If a player who has been dropped for a no show, he or she may be re-entered into the event at the discretion of the appropriate tournament official.

2.3.2 No Show for a Match during Playoffs Round 1 only

If a player does not show for a match during the first round of the Playoffs, it will be presumed that the player has left the tournament. In this case, a tournament official will accept "pick up" participants from any player willing to participate in the Playoffs. The "pick up" participant will be chosen by a tournament official by random selecting from a pool of brawlers who have shown interest in participating by congregating at the Downtown Plaza on a designated server.

2.4 Who Plays First?

The match system in the game will determine the brawler who will go first.

3. Tournament Participants

There are generally three categories of tournament participants: players, officials, and spectators.

3.1 Players

Players are those involved in the event and playing. They must be eligible according to the specifications of the event in which they are playing and adhere to the game rules and event rules. They are responsible for knowing these rules upon entry and maintain a high level of integrity and fair play. Players must obey the instructions of posted announcements and the tournament officials at all times.

3.2 Tournament Officials

Tournament officials are the staff running the event. This may be one person if the event is smaller or a hierarchy of many individuals for larger events. For larger events, officials may have different roles such as keeping track of rounds, pairings and time, making final rulings on rules issues, and managing the structure and site of the event. Any one official may fulfill more than one role. At the beginning of such an event, the tournament officials will be introduced and their roles made clear to the players.

3.2.1 Tournament Manager

This individual is responsible for the physical management for the event site and the logistical needs of the players and staff.

3.2.2 Tournament Judge

This official is responsible for the fair play and integrity within an event. He or she answers questions regarding game play, makes rulings in controversial situations, and generally helps players with their needs during the course of the event. Tournament judges are impartial observers and offer help that supports correct play without giving advice or exhibiting bias. They will intervene in a game if they observe an error or rules violation but will not interfere just because of "poor play."

3.2.3 Head Judge

For larger events with more than one judge, there is a designated head judge. This individual is generally the most experienced and knowledgeable person available regarding the Bakugan Dimensions Tournament rules and event mechanics. If a tournament judge has a question he or she is unable to answer or the result of a situation is not resolved satisfactorily for one or more players, an appeal to the head judge is an option that is offered and encouraged. Once the head judge has spoken regarding a matter, it can no longer be appealed and is considered final.

3.2.4 Scorekeeper

The scorekeeper is responsible for the management of the rounds and pairings in accordance to the rules set forth in this document. They enter results of matches, manage entries and departures from the event, and often keep time for the rounds. He or she may do this manually or with access to specially designed software. The head judge and the scorekeeper generally work most closely as a team to ensure the smooth running of events.

3.3 Spectators

Anyone not in one of the two above categories at an event is a spectator.

Spectators may not interfere with either the event or the roles of the players or the tournament officials. Tournament officials may ask spectators to leave a channel/server/chat or refrain from watching matches if they are deemed to be disruptive. Players who are not engaged in a match and remain within the confines of the tournament are considered to be spectators.

3.4 Participant Information

Players and tournament officials agree to allow Spin Master and the event's tournament manager to publish information regarding the event. This may be for advertising, information, or any other purpose related to the game. Information regarding the event includes but is not limited to names of participants, rankings and results, photographs, videos, event transcripts, interviews, game set lists and descriptions.

4. Event violations

These are rules that cover player participation in Bakugan events that are not specific to issues to game play. The judgment of the tournament officials is the final determinate of whether a violation has occurred and any penalty to be applied.

4.1 Cheating

This is the largest category of violations and includes all types of possible circumstances. Some examples include using "bots" or software that manipulates the original processes of the game, attempting to gain hidden information from an opponent, lying to an opponent or tournament officials about a game state, or using game materials that have been altered to gain an advantage in play.

4.2 Gambling

This category includes any type of benefit, monetary or otherwise, based upon or impacting the results of game play. Players may not offer any bribe to an opponent for conceding, place bets on their own match or others, nor offer or solicit a gift or punishment based on the outcome of a match.

4.3 Unsporting Conduct

Players, officials, and spectators are expected to behave in the most mature fashion possible. For the sake of tournament integrity and the enjoyment of the event for all, unsporting conduct is not to be tolerated. Again, this category can include a wide range of actions such as arguing excessively with a tournament official, intimidating a player or an opponent, using inappropriate language or slurs, disruptive behavior, and physical violence or the threat of physical violence.
